Hande shares views on innovation

BELAGAVI: Having just an academic degree cannot serve as a tool to sustain in this competitive world. One can excel in his job only when academic laurels are backed by hands-on experience", opined Ramon Magsaysay awardee Harish Hande.

He noted this while delivering a special talk on 'Entrepreneurship and Innovation' organised by KLS Gogte Institute of Technology's Department of Management Studies & Research here on Saturday.

Mr Hande, an Indian social entrepreneur who co-founded SELCO (Solar Lighting Company) India in 1995, said that rural India is a potential hub and can be an avenue to excel in the world at large. He urged the students to become solution providers and creators. To support this advice, he quoted several anecdotes from his entrepreneurial journey.

Mr Hande stated that indigenous problems should be tackled with indigenous ways. He shared his dream amongst the students to make India, a solution provider to the seekers
